Don’t miss seeing “Beauty and the Beast” in December!

“Beauty and the Beast” was an old fairy tale first published in France in 1740. In 1991 Disney stripped the tale down to its essential romantic core and made it into a cartoon feature that was so successful that it was nominated for an Academy Award for Best Picture. Broadway producers saw the film and immediately felt it was perfect for a musical. Disney’s opening scene of Belle waltzing through her little provincial town was made for the stage.

It’s a long way from Broadway to Gualala. When Lynne Atkins decided on this play for this year’s holiday musical she didn’t have the kind of professional production facilities that would make this show easy to stage. Instead, she had a group of fanatical volunteers who would follow her anywhere.

Still the challenge was daunting. The cast of thirty ranges from a hideous beast to a wood chopping machine. Enormous production numbers fill the stage with twenty or more actors all singing and dancing at the same time. Except for five days around Thanksgiving, the cast is rehearsing every night until their first performance. But they are not the only ones under the gun.

Six members of the construction crew have to build the complex set, designed by Kathye Hitt, that spans the distance between a quaint French village and a mythic castle. Fifty costumes, ranging from a dancing spoon to an enchantress have to be constructed, and sewn, keeping the ten seamstresses in the costume shop very busy. Five more costumes were rented, since constructing an animated wardrobe was a bit beyond our grasp. Five music directors and coaches, a choreographer and all together thirty-five volunteers are working on the technical side of the production, all of them toiling as hard as the cast to pull this production together.

Be prepared to enter a vivid fairy tale this December as Art Center Theater converts the Arts Center stage into a magical world. You will laugh, and be touched by this moving tale of arrogance, pride, true love, and redemption. Shows begin December 7 and run through the 16th. Ticket sales are already brisk, so buy yours early!
