

The Horvaths are Gualala Arts Rock Stars!

Art and Renee Horvath of Ideal Quarry in Mt. Shasta first participated in the Gualala Arts exhibit "Suiseki / Viewing Stones of California" in February. They brought many cut boulders, tables, benches and what is now "Steve's Bar" and installed them in the Gualala Arts Center and around the grounds. Ideal Quarry was also key to the creation and installation of the first Haiku Path in the United States, which was installed and inaugurated on the Arts Center grounds this year. They returned for the Art in the Redwoods festival and had a vendor booth for their slabs, tables and benches and sold almost all of what they brought to the show. In appreciation for the many sales of their pieces that Gualala Arts has made and to show their support of Gualala Arts, Art and Renee decided to donate the beautiful California Peridotite "Gateway" boulders that flank the main walkway to the building. These massive boulders will now remain forever as a welcoming gateway to all visitors to the Arts Center. If you would like to become a Gualala Arts Rock Star, please pick up a donation card and give what you can. If you would like to have a stone bench, bar, sign, table, water feature or stone sculpture custom designed and created just for you, contact Ideal Quarry at 530-925-4517.

Diane Rasmussen has been a long time supporter of Gualala Arts and has frequently participated in Arts Center exhibits over the years. For the Art in the Landscape exhibit in June she entered her beautiful painting on copper titled "Enso: Oneness With All." This piece was dramatically installed by Art Dreyer in the meditation grove, suspended between two of the "fairy ring" redwood trees that encircle the stage. As Indian Summer began to set in Diane realized that the piece could never find a more appropriate or stunning location than where it already hung, and she decided to donate it to Gualala Arts. "Enso" now becomes another beautiful part of the permanent collection of outdoor art on the Gualala Arts Center grounds, joining such pieces as Kazuko Matthews' Ravens Wall and Robert Holmes' Kneeling and Walking Man sculptures. Gualala Arts appreciates Diane's generous and heartfelt donation, and is thrilled that "Enso" will forever gaze down on the meditation grove. Donations such as this enhance the beauty and enjoyment of the Gualala Arts Center, and we welcome all artists to consider donating appropriate pieces to the organization.
